

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

(Great Britain may speak for herself) to use the best English translation of the Bible which is available to them, namely, the edition of 1901. Fortunately the Revised Version is already well known and widely used among us; all scholars and well-trained ministers have adopted it, while an innumerable host of Sunday-school teachers and educated laymen have it in their hands. To all such, and to those who have still to learn that the Authorized Version of 1611 is and ought to be superseded, this American Standard Edition of the Revised Version is to be insistently commended. All who have at heart the supremacy of the Christian religion, and who wish for a spread of the knowledge of and reverence for the Bible, should promote the use of the best English translation of the Bible which has yet been prepared.

A Meditation.

Rev. 3:21. "He that overcometh, to him will I give to sit down with me in my throne, as I also overcame, and sat down with my Father in his throne."

God is the great servant; he rules the universe through what he does for it; he is supreme because he has given all to all, and himself for all, in perpetual outgoing of heart and life. Jesus Christ has overcome all oppositions to the free, godlike doing of the works of love, and has given himself in perfect surrender for our sake. Overcoming thus, and attaining to the perfection of loving service, he has entered into the supremacy of God, and sat down, as it were, at his side. To one who overcomes selfishness and self-will, and follows Christ in love and service, attaining to the likeness of the Master, the heavenly voice promises admission to a place at the Master's side. The overcoming that set Christ beside the Father will set any soul of man beside Christ.

WILLIAM NEWTON CLARKE.